

National Weather Service Jacksonville Tropical Cyclone Program

Above: The Track and Wind Swath of Tropical Storm “Fay” in August of 2008 as it crossed north Florida.

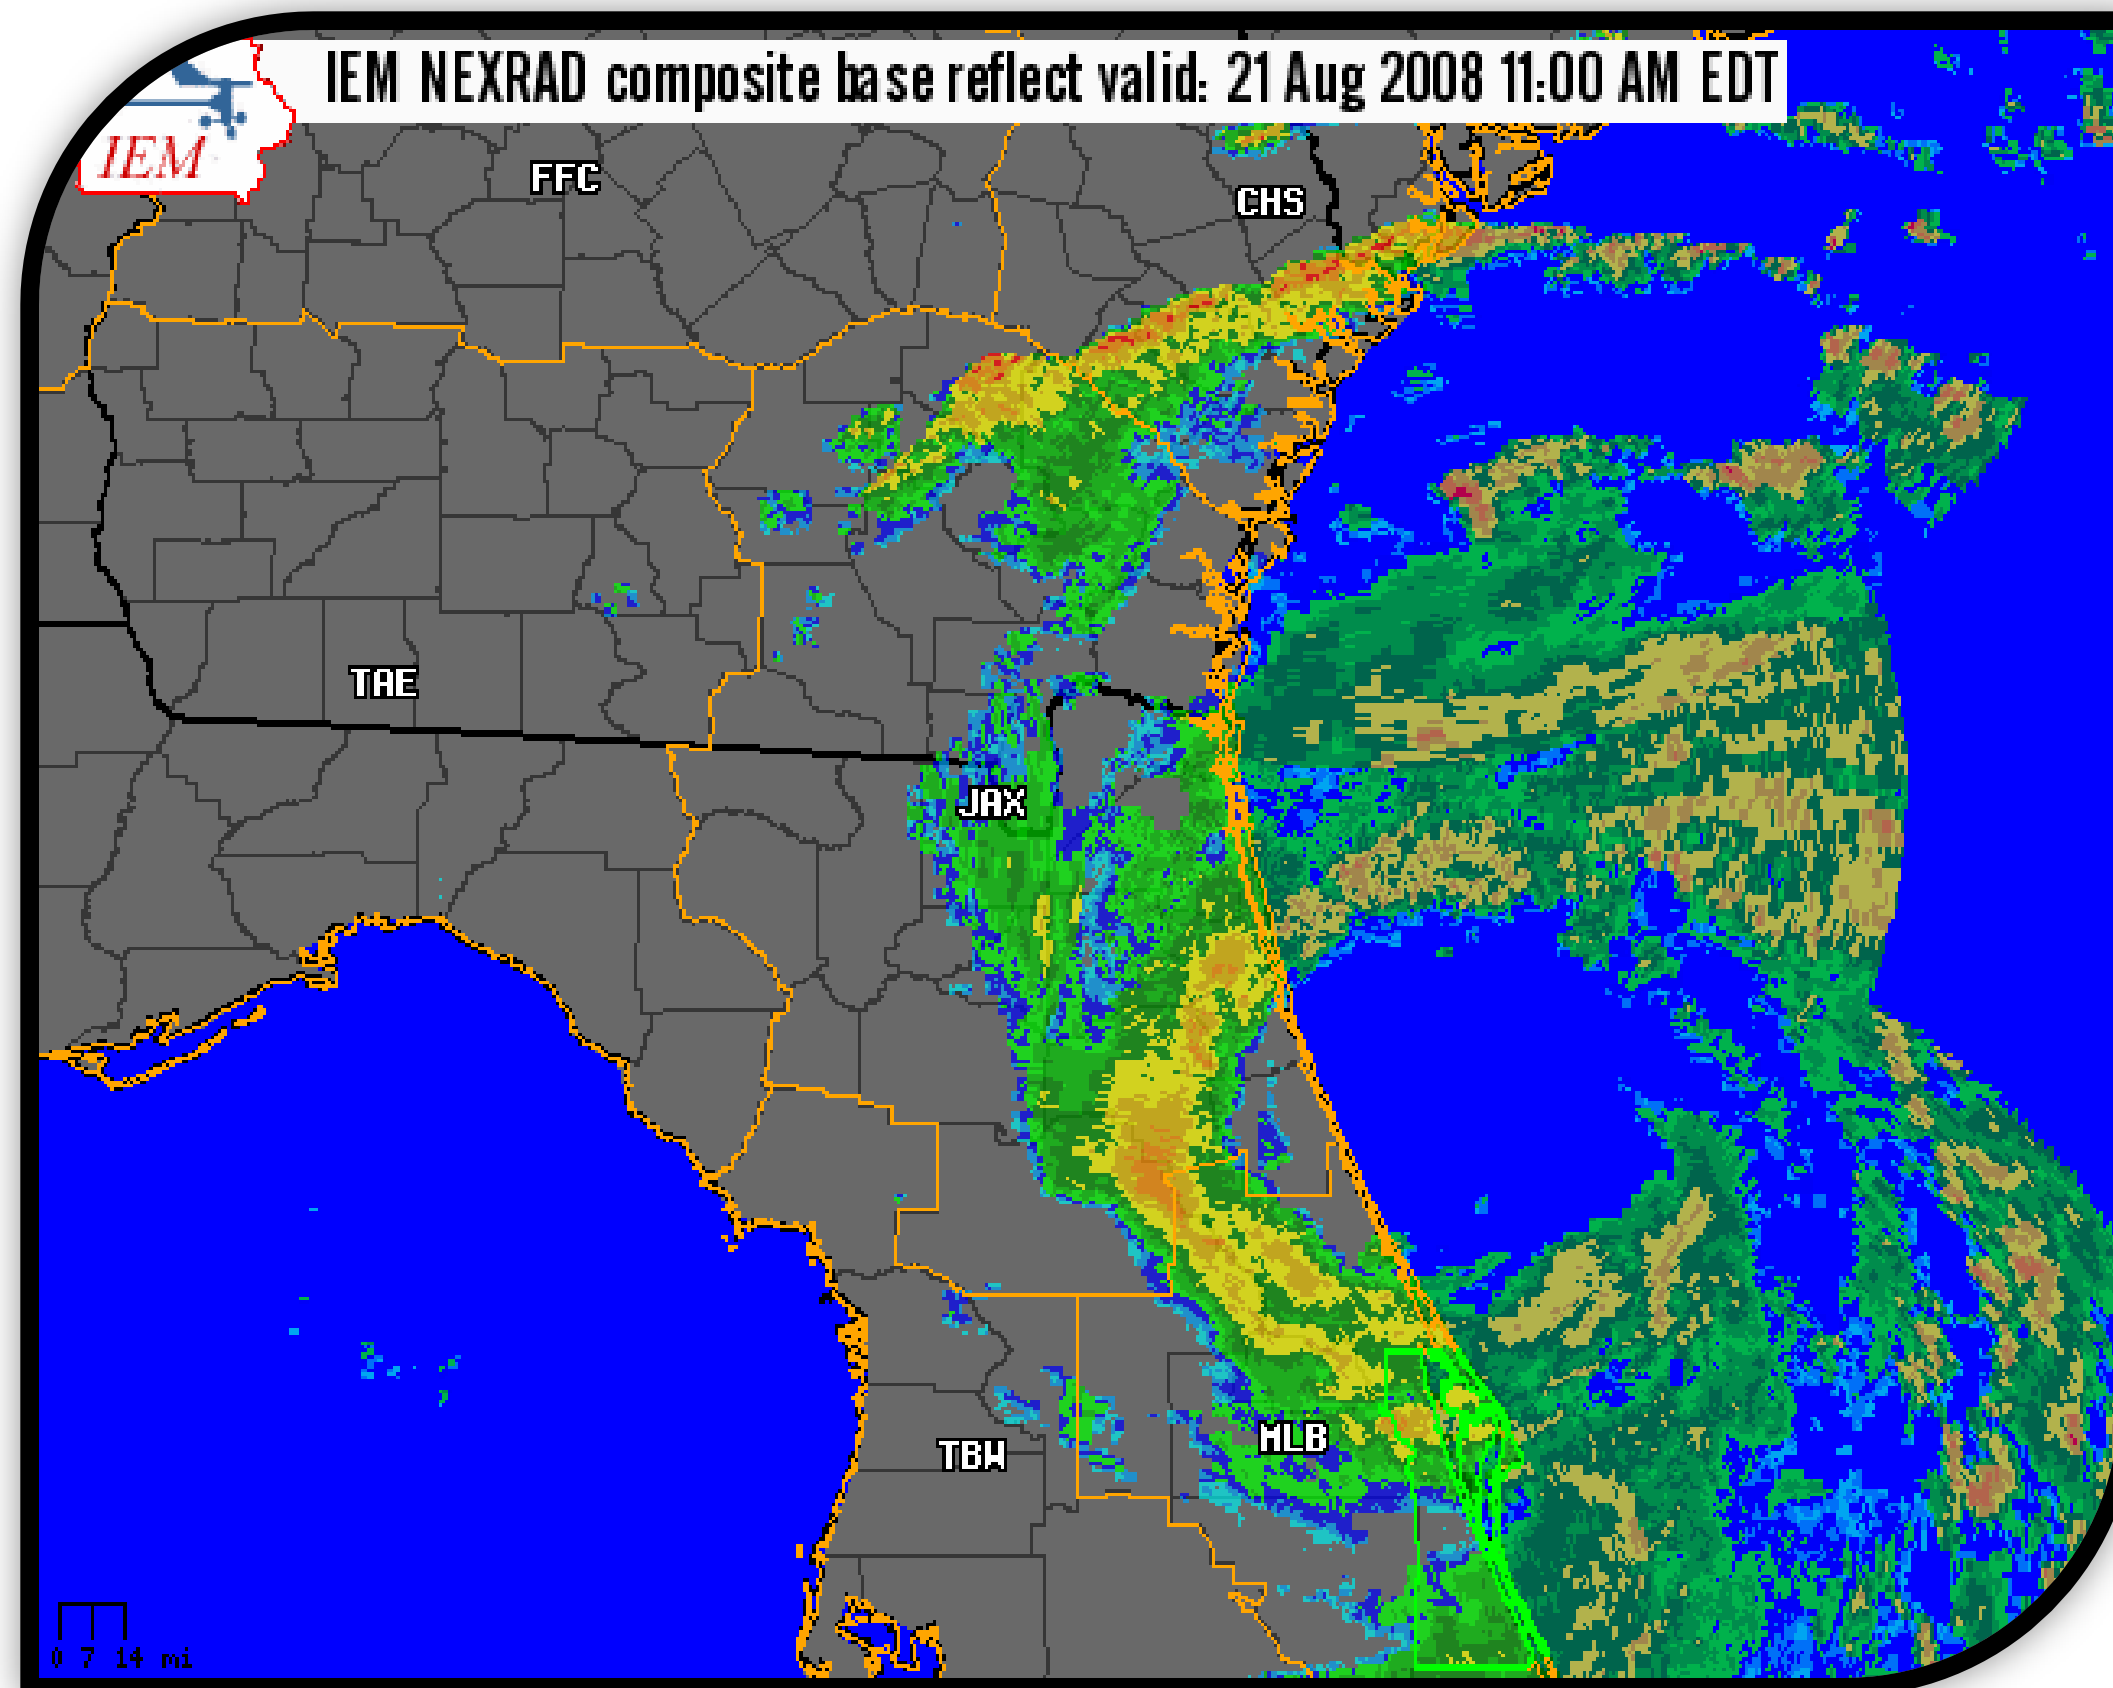

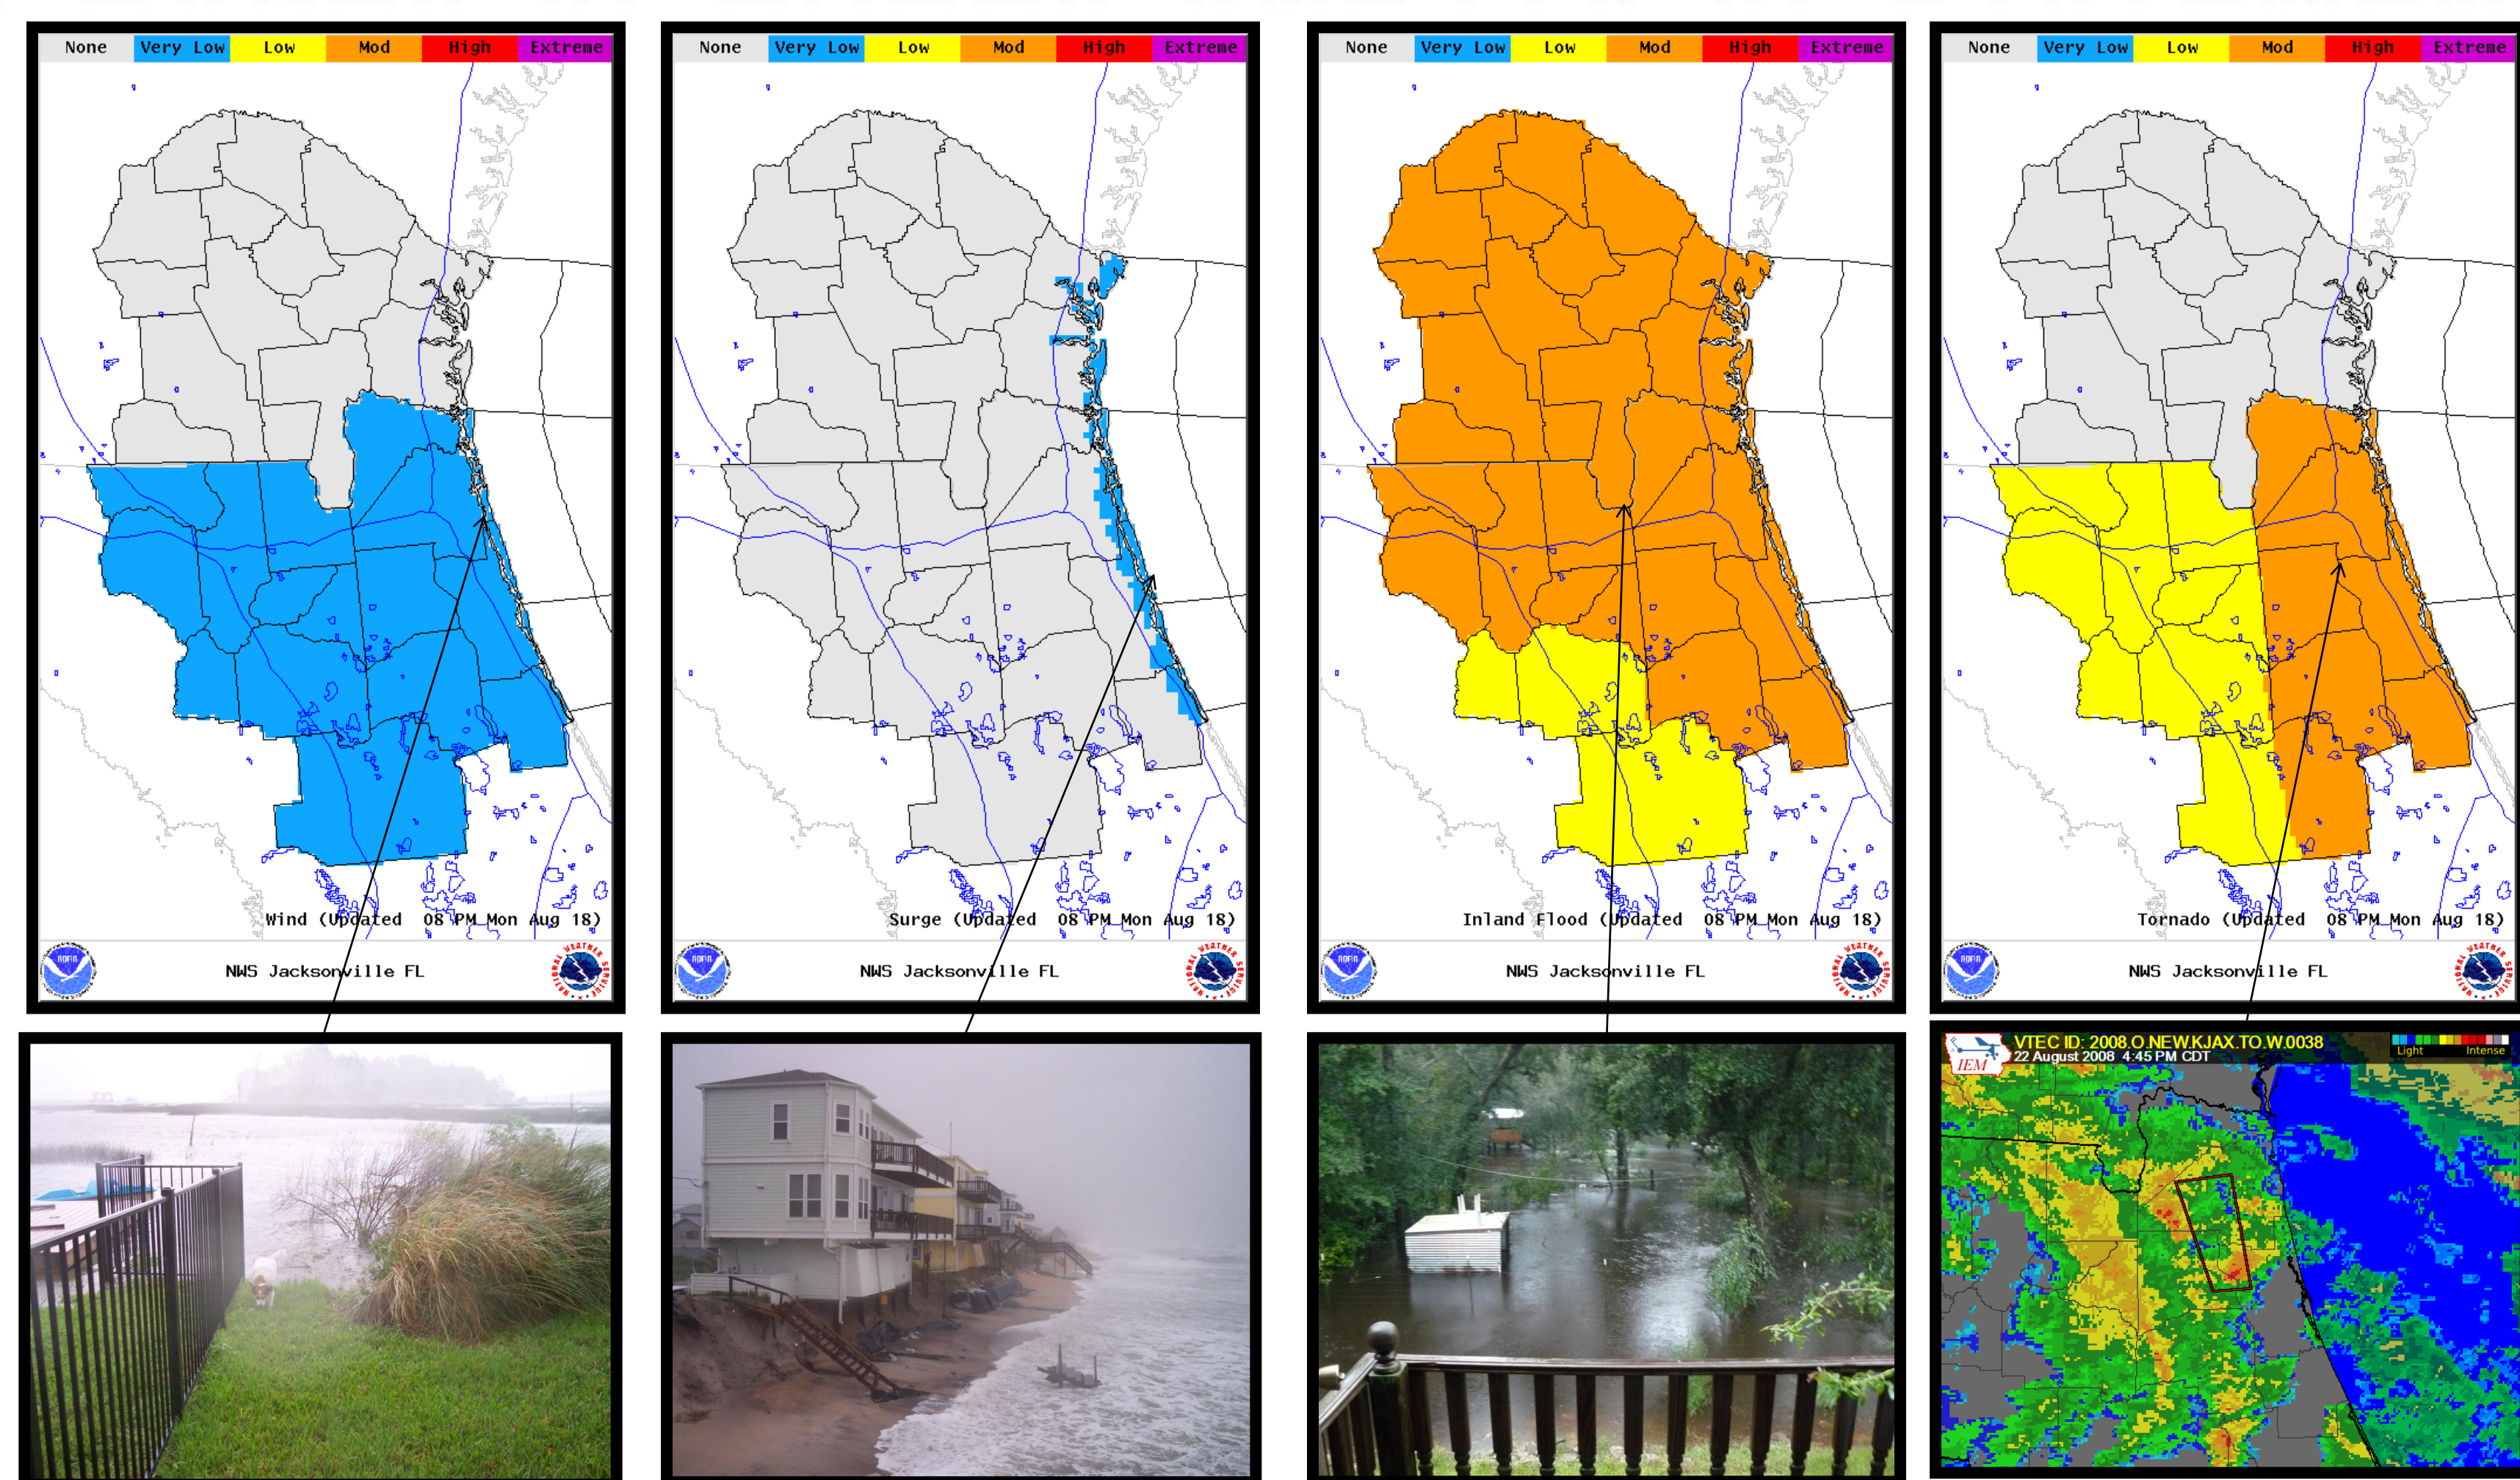

Right: GIS Modeling of the Storm Tide from Tropical Storm “Fay” near San Marco utilizing the LIDAR Digital Elevation Model.

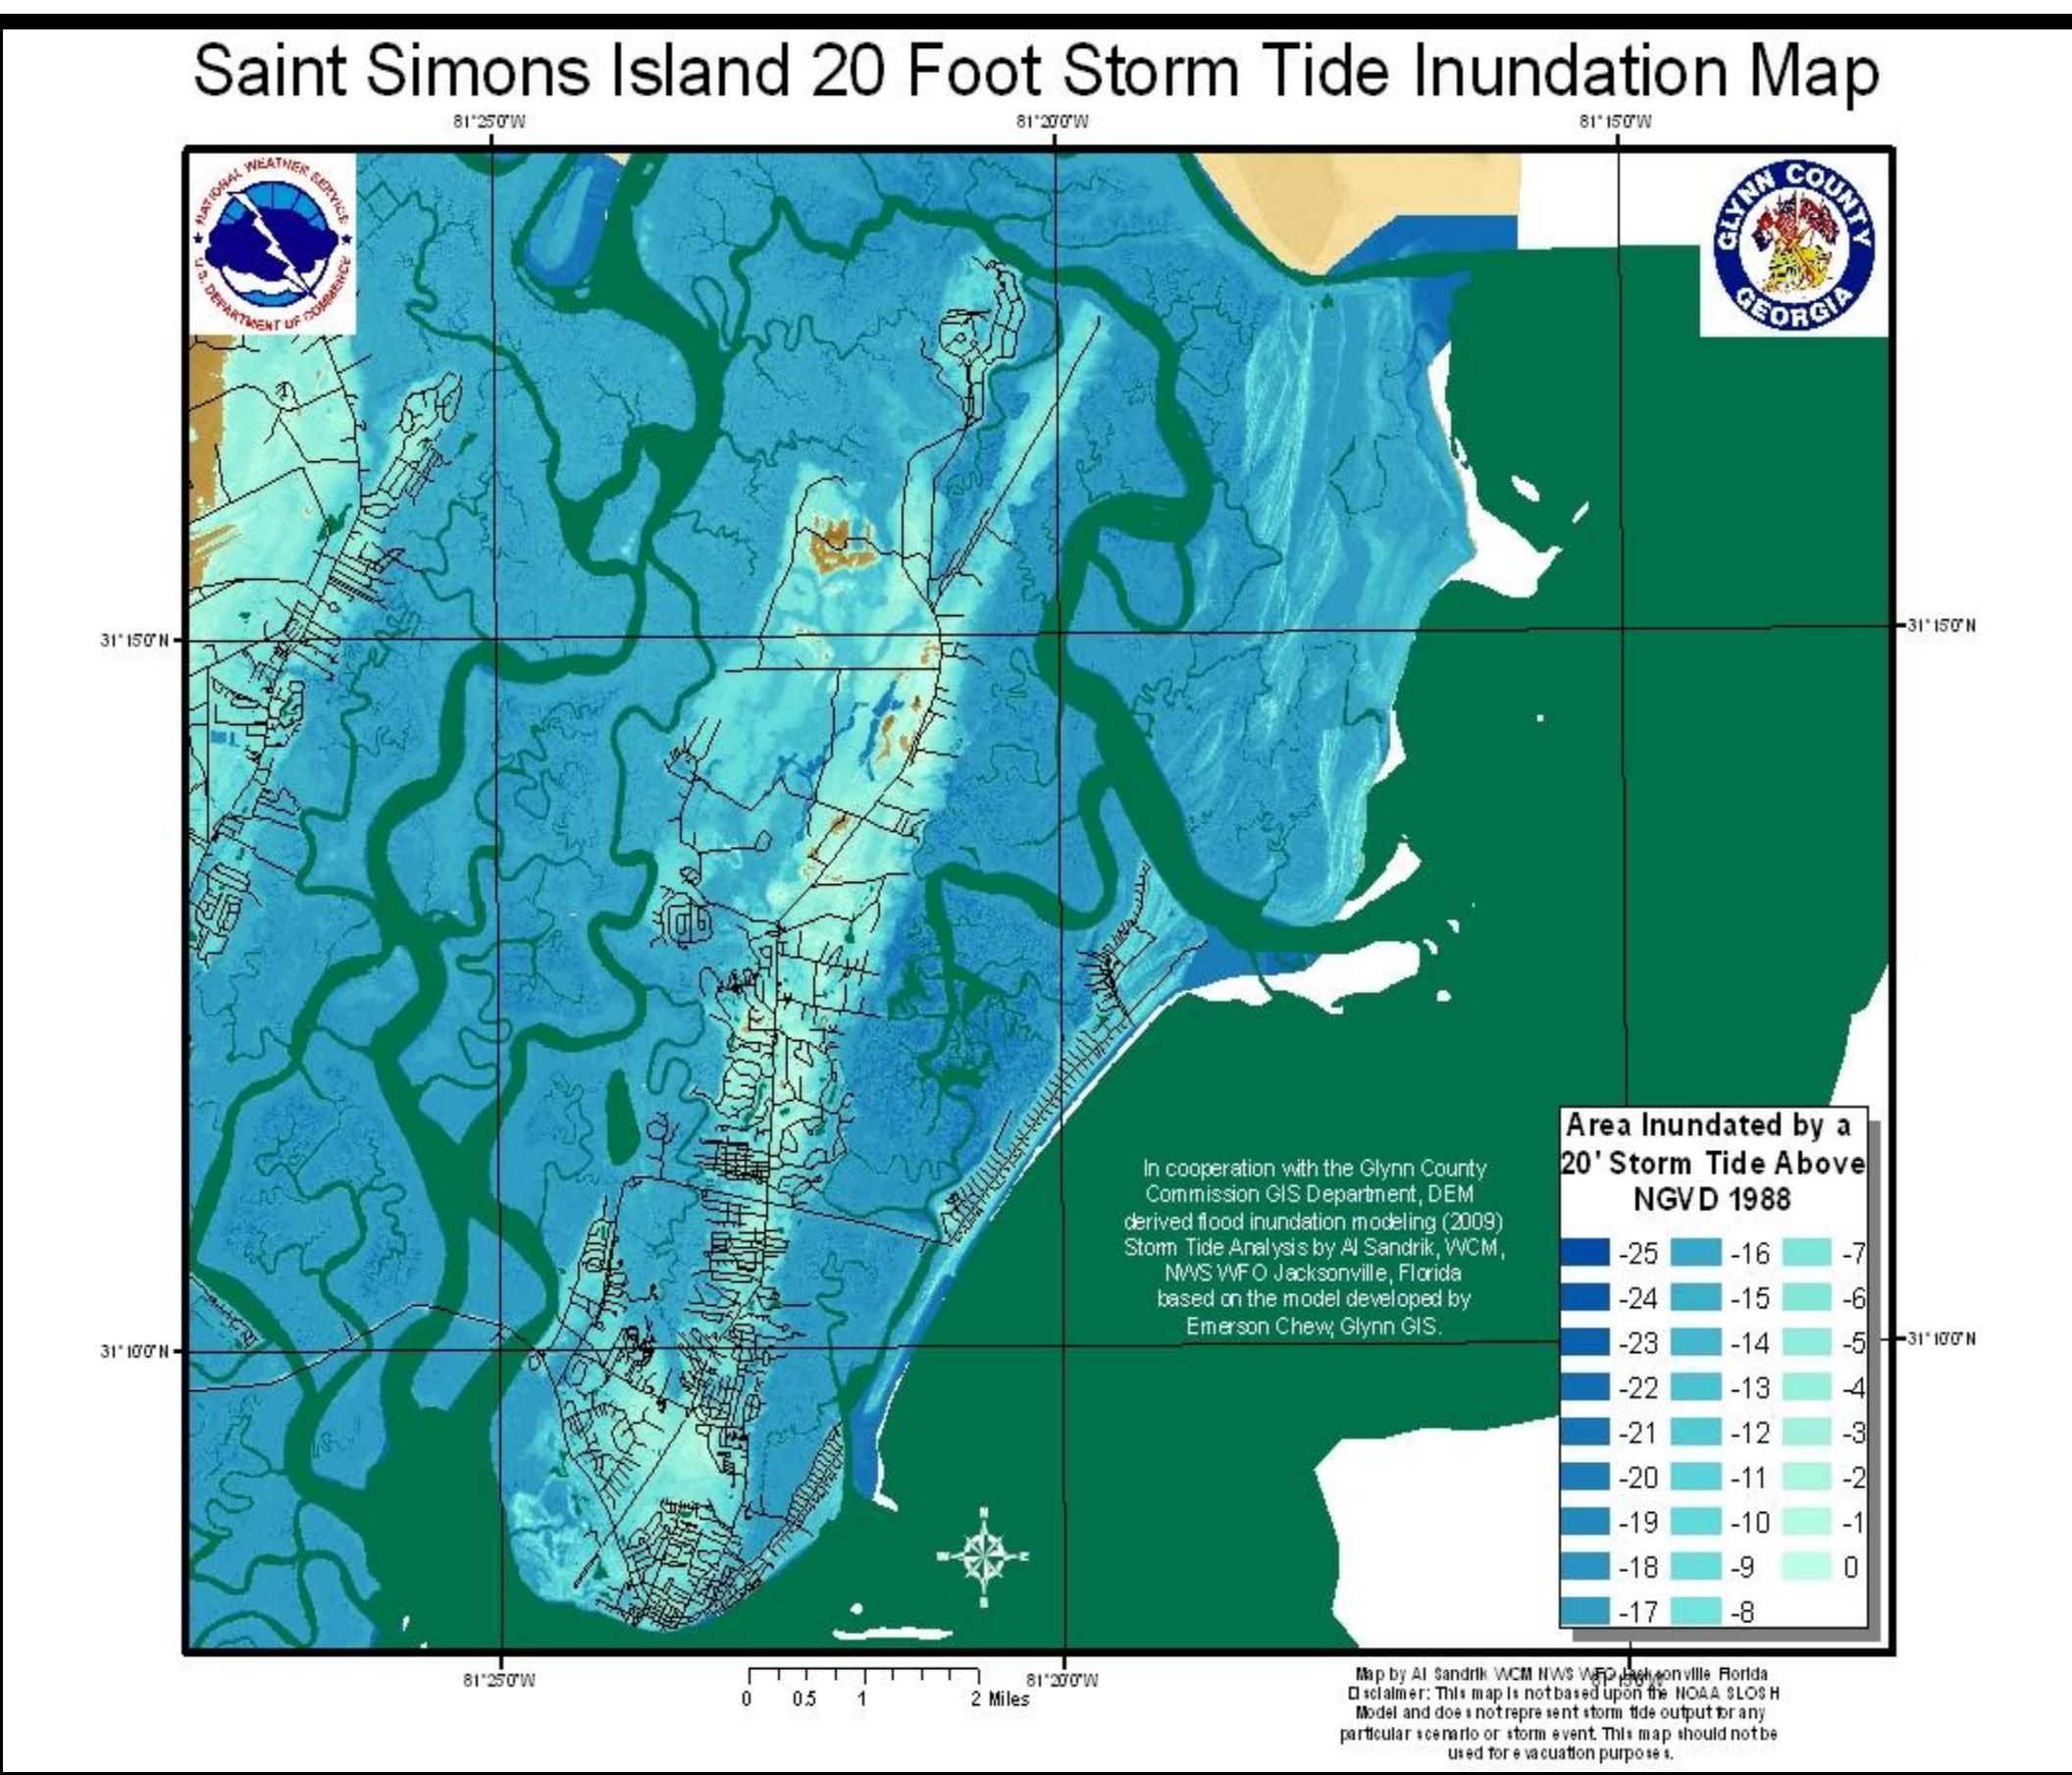

Post storm analysis of storm tide flooding near Landon Park during Tropical Storm “Fay” 2008. Arrows indicate the locations of the picture’s subjects with the “+” signs indicating the position of the photographer. Photos by Duval County Emergency Management.

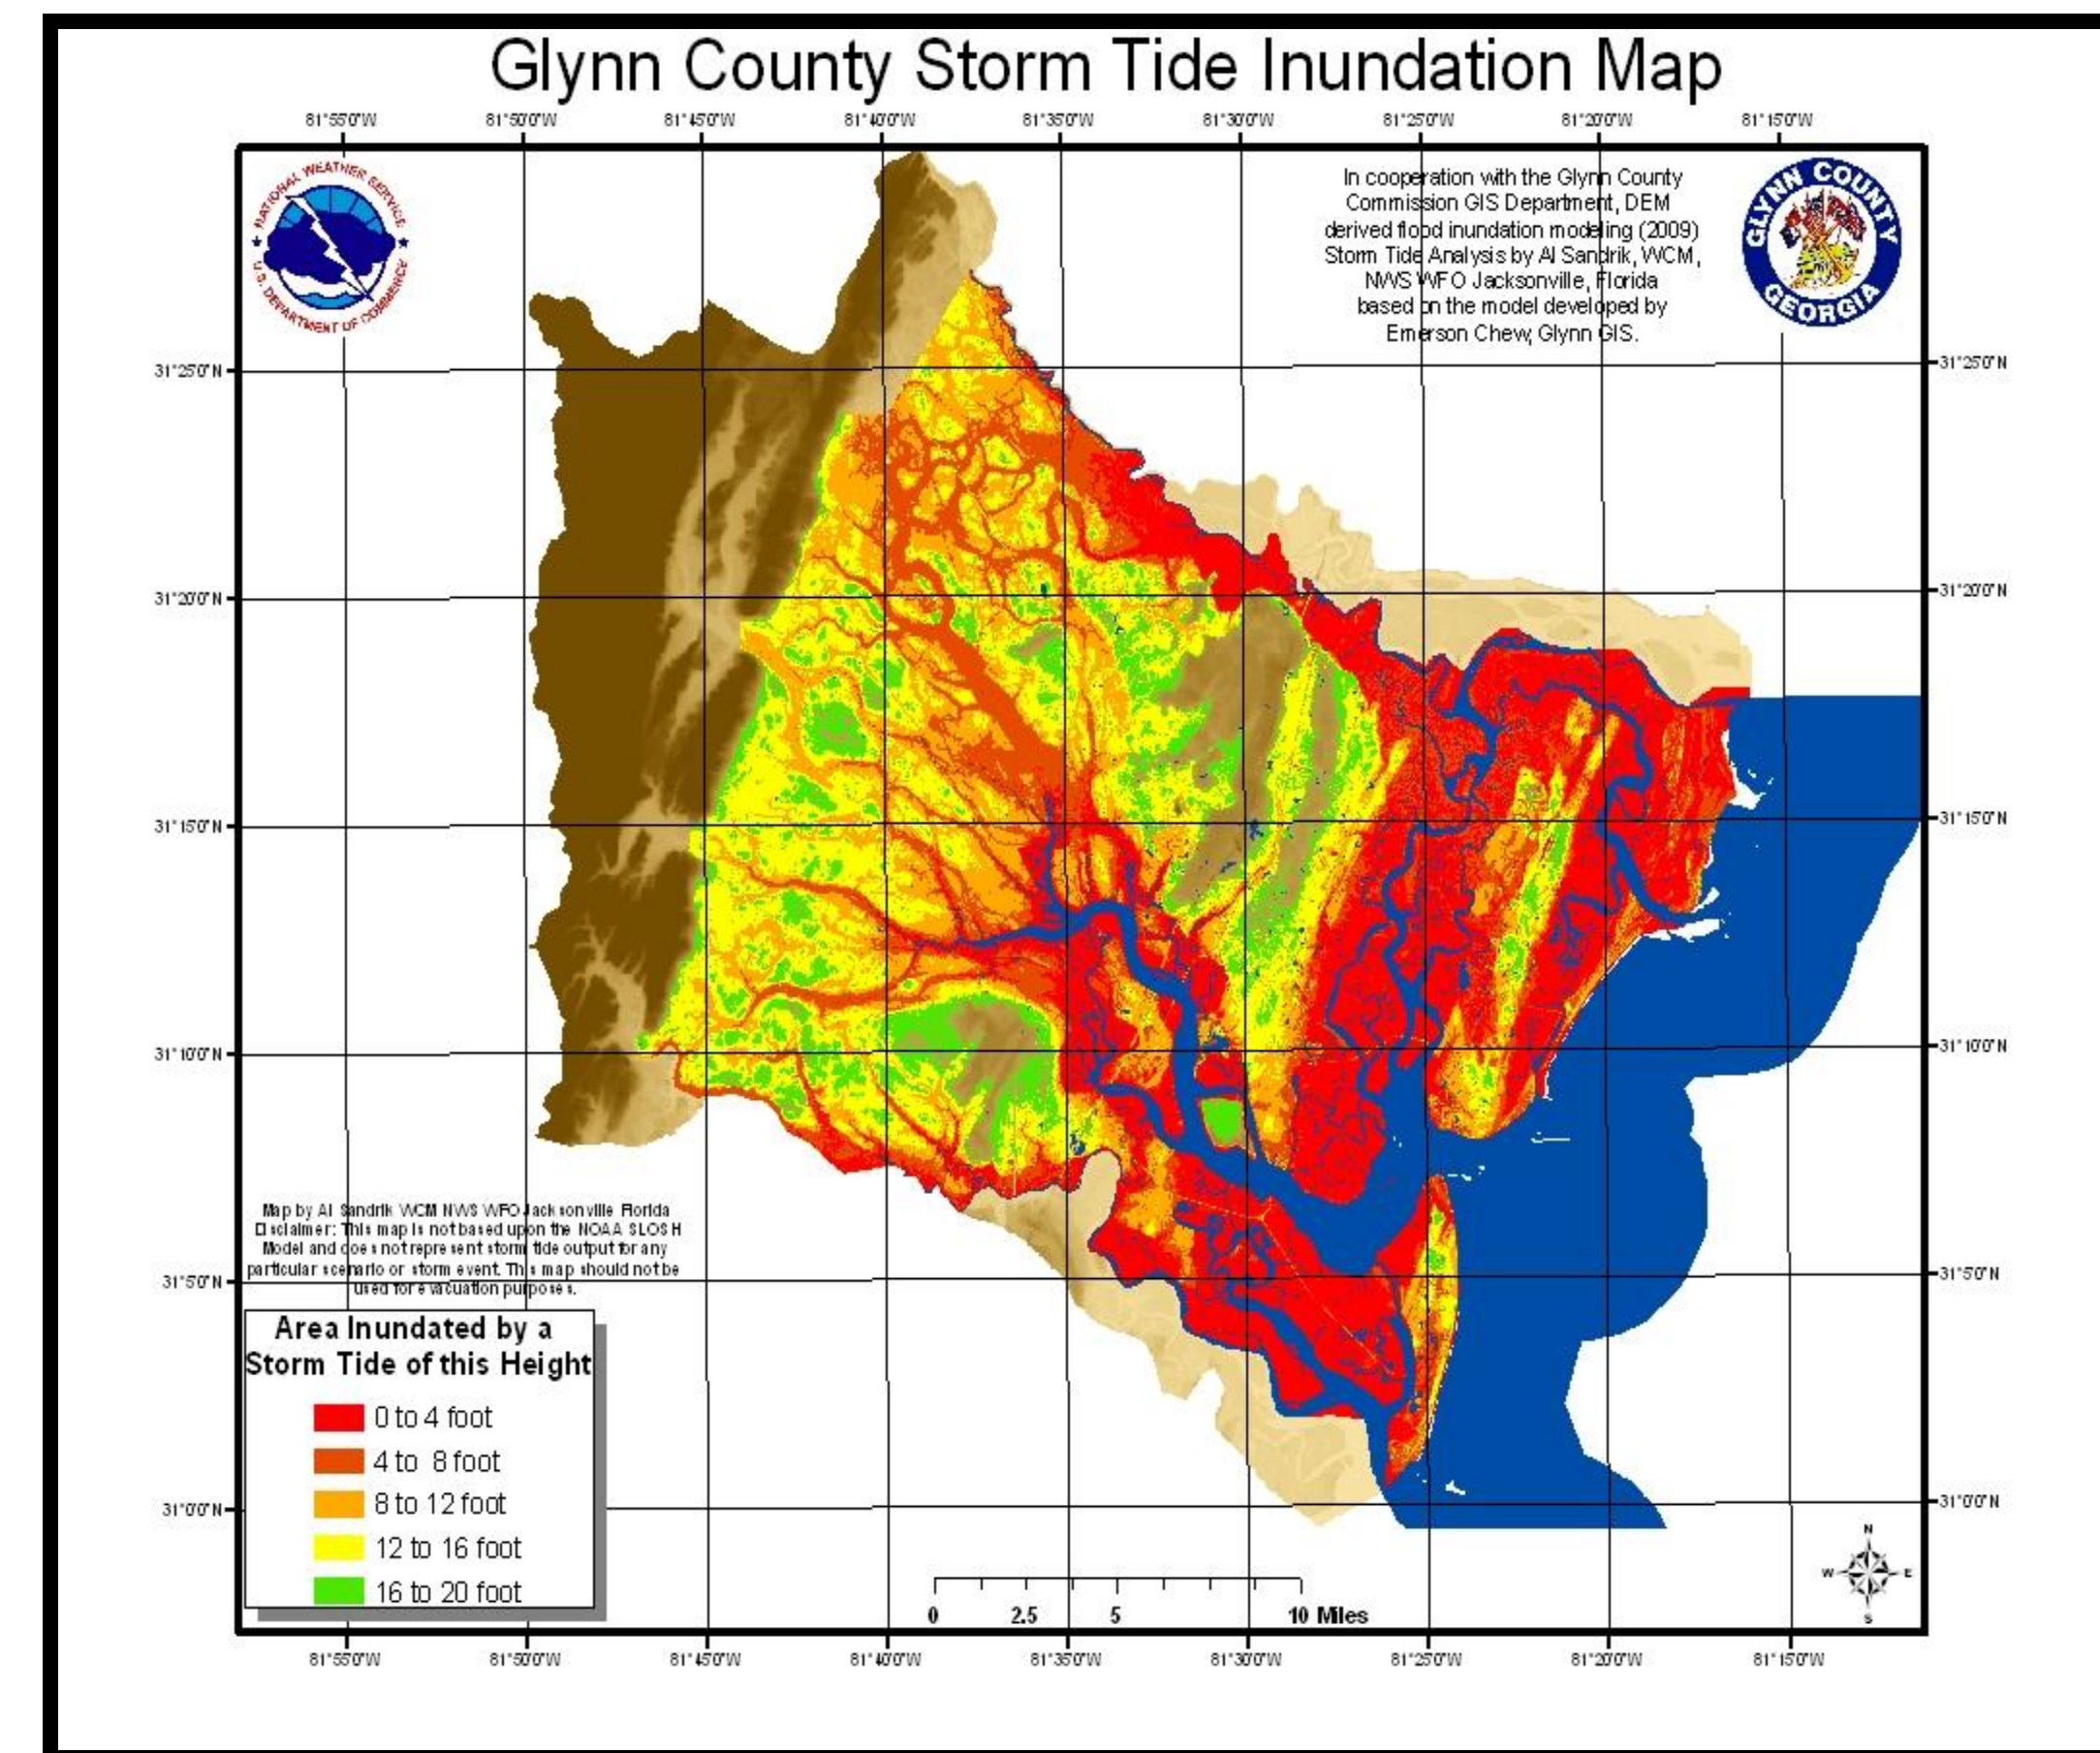

GRAPHICAL HURRICANE LOCAL STATEMENT

Doppler radar image of Tropical Storm “Fay” as it approached the northeast Florida coast on August 21st, 2008.

Storm Tide Inundation Modeling produced in Conjunction with the Glynn County, Georgia Graphical Information Systems (GIS) Department and NWS Weather Forecast Office, Jacksonville, Florida

Graphical Hurricane Local Statement products produced by Weather Forecast Office Jacksonville, Florida during Tropical Storm “Fay” and impacts related to the hazard graphic.